DISTANT TALKS

PhDs Behind the Scenes

Through logistics geographies: Dimensions, Norms, Frictions and the Human Being

Moderators:

Elia Silvestro and Agostino Strina, Politecnico di Torino

Speakers:

Niccolò Cuppini, SUPSI and Into The Black Box; Laetitia Deblanc, Université Gustave Eiffel, Paris;
Stephen Ramos, University of Georgia.

In the relentless public- and private-led reconfiguration of Global Production Networks, logistics geographies have emerged both in their material and immaterial expressions as generators of global infrastructure, flows and norms but also as a locus of human frictions and negotiations. With this DISTant Talk, we seek to put a variety of viewpoints in dialogue: social and spatial, quantitative and qualitative, global and local. How do logistics spaces take shape in metropolitan areas, and how is the urban reshaped by logistics? What are the implications and frictions inherent to becoming physical corridors of impalpable logistics networks? Where do the norms of logistical spaces encounter the ecologies involved in planning logistics spaces? We will engage in a conversation with three international scholars investigating the multiplicity of logistics, charting their different theoretical and methodological approaches.
